President and 4th Imam Talib Shareef of The Nation's Mosque, Masjid Muhammad Traces African Roots to Guinea-Bissau with AfricanAncestry.com

Muslim Americans across the Nation Exploring Genetic Roots in the Motherland

WASHINGTON, DC (March 2015) – L-R: Imam Talib Shareef, Gina Paige: AfricanAncestry.com co-founder Gina Paige unveils the African roots of Imam Talib Shareef of the Nation's Mosque in a ceremonial event at the Masjid Muhammad in Washington, DC recently. Imam Shareef shares ancestry with the Balanta people in Guinea-Bissau. Starting with the Atlanta Masjid of Al-Islam and now with the Nation's Mosque, African-American Muslim communities across the nation are integrating genetics ancestry tracing in their programs, connecting their roots with the highly populated Muslim countries in Africa. African Ancestry is the Black-owned technology company that pioneered genetics ancestry tracing for people of African descent across the world.
